M. Axelrod : No Symbols Where None Intended: Literary Essays from Laclos to Beckett before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised No Symbols Where None Intended: Literary Essays from Laclos to Beckett:

An homage to Nabokov's Lectures on Literature, this collection of essays sheds new light on canonical authors such as Ibsen, Beckett, and Strindberg. Using style and structure as the connective thread, Mark Axelrod joins a wide and deep conversation on writers on writing.

"What is vital reading, vital generosity, and the courage to make these two, now often submerged crafts, immediately present? Here in Mark Axelrod's essays these acts are given a generative and imaginative intricacy, beautifully shaped and recorded. They evoke transformation, discovery, and a repository of experienced consciousness that has the nerve to both speak and challenge and return these things to their precarious wonders." -Author of How the Night is Divided and A HalfMan Dreaming "In No Symbols Where None Intended, Mark Axelrod deconstructs the dramatic dimension of Laclós, Turgenev, and Beckett. Continuing Nabokov and Benjamin's rare tradition of critical virtuosity, Axelrod takes his nuanced arguments, themselves a wonder of structure and style, through a grand detour of original insights and never fails to bring them back home to unexpected and illuminating conclusions." - Pablo Baler, Associate Professor of Latin American Literature, California State University, Los Angeles, USA
