And I know that sounds like an extremely odd combinationBy Jennifer ThompsonI had already read Bo Jinn's work on philosophy of religion, so I half-expected something along those lines in his fictional work. Saul Vartanian strikes me as kind of a cross between John Rambo and Winston Smith from 1984. And I know that sounds like an extremely odd combination, but I swear he manages to pull it off. I hate spoilers, so I won't say any more than I have to..... see for yourselves. I think Jinn has just given birth to something great. And oh - yeah - killer artwork, which is a rarity these days.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful.

Great ResourceBy marissa mitchellGreat book to have around for monologues and reading in general. I want to find more book like this one.0 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Great experienceBy Cheryl HastingsI ordered the monologue book for my teenage daughter. It arrived in great condition and in a timely manner. I have no complaints about my experience.

A diverse collection of monologues featuring the voices of women through the ages Drawn from poetry, fiction, diaries, journals, and documents of public record, these selections, although not originally intended for theatrical or cinematic performances, offer unique dramatic opportunities for actors, speakers, students, or anyone interested in women's studies. Stefan Rudnicki has brought together selections from well-known as well as obscure authors, providing a tremendous range of women's perspectives from a variety of sources: poems by Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Emily Dickinson, Christina Rossetti, and Sappho, among others; passages from Mary Shelley's journal, the diaries of Anais Nin, and the memoirs of Isadora Duncan; polemics from Mary Wollstonecraft and Joan of Arc, as well as Susan B. Anthony's "On Woman's Right to Suffrage"; and selections from the novels of Emily and Charlotte Bronte, Jane Austen, Ursula K. LeGuin, and others.

About the AuthorStefan Rudnicki was born in Krakow, Poland, and lived in Stockholm, Sweden, and Montreal, Canada, before arriving in the United States—where he was educated principally at Columbia University and the Yale School of Drama. In addition to having directed number theatrical productions in New York, regional theatre, and abroad, he is also an actor, producer, award-winning playwright, photographer, and film and video director. His other books include The Actor's Book of Classical Monologues and The Actor's Book of Classical Scenes.
