Enda Walsh : The Small Things (NHB Modern Plays) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Small Things (NHB Modern Plays):

A fierce and devastating fable about enforced silence - commissioned and premiered by Paines Plough, one of Britain's leading new-writing companies, to open their This Other England season at the Menier Chocolate Factory in London. Two houses, each perched on a mountain top, stare at each other across a deep valley. A man and a woman talk about the small things - parquet floor zigzagging down corridors, the memory of mother's breasts, brown sauce and soggy chips. But these minutiae disguise a bigger story of brutality and unfaltering loyalty which emerges horrifically through the chit chat. 'Walsh once again proves himself an inspired wordsmith' - Daily Telegraph 'Walsh's beautiful, terrible play... is a small play about the big things and the writing is harrowingly precise and poetic' - Guardian

About the Author Winner of the 1997 Stewart Parker and the George Devine Awards, he also won the Abbey Theatre Writer in Association Award for 2006 and two Critic's Awards and a Herald Archangel Award (2008). His plays, notably "Disco Pigs", "Bedbound", "Small Things", "Chatroom", "New Electric Ballroom" and "The Walworth Farce", have been translated into more than 20 languages.
