Liam Williams : Travesty (NHB Modern Plays) before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Travesty (NHB Modern Plays):

Why have you Googled average couple how often sex UKrdquo;?rsquo;Ben doesnrsquo;t even like Anna that much. She doesnrsquo;t take life seriously enough. And then a couple of years go by and hersquo;s in absolute floods and she just wishes things could be different.This is a play about gender, the ethical dimensions of modern love, and a mandatory sillier third theme to make the whole thing seem less serious, in this case lemon tart. Travesty is the debut play by Liam Williams, double Edinburgh Comedy Award nominee and the 'voice of a generation' (Independent). It was produced by Fight in the Dog and premiered at the 2016 Edinburgh Festival Fringe. 'The Fringers' is most articulate and original chronicler of twenty-something angst', Telegraph
